The Equestrian Team completed its second year as a varsity sport as the eleventh placed team in the nation. The equestriennes were led through a difficult competition season by senior captain Rebecca Taylor, who finished her collegiate riding career as Reserve Champion in Intermediate over fences at the 1998 Intercollegiate Horse Show Association National Horse Show. The hunt seat team earned the Regional championship for the second straight season, and added the 1998 Zone championship to their numerous wins.

For the first time ever, Sewanee fielded a western team, and with only seven riders, led the region for most of the year. Both the hunt seat and western teams competed with 20 of the top teams in the nation at Tournament of Champions horse shows.

i a healthy blend of upper class leadership and youthful enthusiasm, the -1998 Women's Swimming and Diving Team completed a successful 5-3 n. Highlights include a first place finish at the Centre Relays, second place e SCAC invitational, and having an individual qualify for Division III onals. In all, six individual records were broken. Two by sophomore Amy n (100 breast, 200 IM), two by freshman Co-MVP Elizabeth Pate (400 500 Free), and two by freshman Co-MVP Anna Mayfield (100 & 200 stroke). Also, both medley relay records were bested. In the 200 Medley , Errett Neil and sophomore Loren Carver joined Mayfield and Flynn to set ark. While in the 400 medley relay, Mayfield, Flynn and Pate teamed with r Kalah Tompkins to set the new record. The divers added valuable points were again led by Junior Mackenzie Johnson along with an impressive first from Abby Stephens. Sewanee will never be able to replace seniors: Mallory nitt, Laura Jennings, Erett Neil and Lauren wilkes, but with the returning mers and divers and with the addition of key recruits, head coach Max miller looks for continued success for the women's program in the future.

Diving

The 1997-98 Men's Swimming and Diving Team ended the season with an SCAC championship. The team finished with a most impressive 8-1 dual meet record (the only loss to Division I Georgia Tech) establishing fourteen individual and four relay records. Two freshmen; Co-MVP Keith Salzar (100 & 200 Breast, 200 IM) and Justin Kelly (500, 1000 & 1650 freestyle) set three individual records apiece. Sophomore Chuch Seymore became the first male in over 20 years to represent Sewanee at the National level. He also set school marks in the 50 free and 100 back. Co-MVP Brian Spurlock closed out a stellar career by capturing four individual records (100 & 200 free, 200 back, 100 fly). The trio of Spurlock, Seymour, and Salzar were joined by junior Brett Moldenhauer to set four relay records (200 & 400 medley, 200 & 400 free). Junior diver Jon Morris was dominant on the boards, breaking his own records in both one and three meter events. It was a special season for seniors: Larry Cook, Thomas Dykstra, Scott Evans, Jeff Frazier, Elliot Leflar, Gregg Sheppard and Brian Spurlock. The program seems to be set as a championship contender for years to come.

The angels were so grateful that man was able t recognize and preserve such unique joy, that eve man, woman and child living now and forever i Sewanee was assigned an angel. It is this angel's du to preserve the spirit of Sewanee in one's mind.

Charles E. Cheston

The following excerpts highlighting some of the many contributions and accomplishments of Charles Cheston were written by Dr. Charles Ba Professor of Forestry, Emeritus, and appeared as a series of articles entitled "PIONEER NATURAL RESOURCE MANAGEMENT ON T SEWANEE DOMAIN" in the 1996 summer issues of the Messenger.

In 1942 Charles Edward Cheston was employed by the University to serve as University Forester and Engin and to be the head of the Forestry Department, in which he was the only member. Cheston came to Sewanee equipp with degrees in forestry from Syracuse and Yale. His tenure of some thirty-five years with the University w characterized by his prodigious energy, initiative and ambition which were focused on two objectives: to deve an academic forestry program equal in quality to any in the country and to engineer changes in the Domain wh would provide greater benefits to the University and the community.

When Cheston moved to Sewanee, many features of the Domain present today were not in existence. Amo them were a reliable supply of water for municipal use, well-marked boundaries of the Domain, a topographic m of the Domain, the lakes, grass greens on the golf course, the network of firelanes, engineered residential subdivisi such as Proctor's Hall, deer and migratory waterfowl and shorebirds, pine plantations, information on the quant character and silvicultural needs of timber growing on the Domain, and good forest fire prevention, protection, suppression measures by the State.

It should be noted that in addition to being the principal architect and executor of most of the changes d above, Cheston, as University Engineer, was called upon to assist in campus development and improvement proj such as building construction, water and sewage treatment facilities, surveying and mapping, streets, athletic fi and the airport, to name a few. Also, he was responsible for adding to the University's land holdings including, am others, land now occupied by Lake Jackson and the 850-acre "Bowater tract" located several miles from the Do on Jumpoff Road. Cheston relied heavily on several natives of Sewanee to perform much of the field work invo in the many projects cited above.

Mapping of the Domain

Lacking a reliable map showing property lines, contours, and roads and other man-made features, Che proceeded to make one in the mid 1940's. Completed in 1947 after over 20 miles of very rough terrain aroun Domain boundary had been surveyed with steel tape and engineer's transit by Cheston and his helpers, the topogra map which he drafted from his survey is still in use today.

Creation of Lakes on the Domain

For many years after the founding of the University several large springs on the Domain provided wat adequate volume and quality for usual domestic purposes. As the community grew, deep wells were drill supplement the flow from the springs. Eventually, the springs and wells could not meet the demand for water, as early as 1953 it was evident that a new source of supply had to be found. Cheston and Vice-Chancellor Ed McCrady, a biologist and man of many talents, discussed the possibility of impounding water from springs or su runoff behind low-cost earthen dams, a practice whose feasibility on the Cumberland Plateau had been demonstrated by the United States Soil Conserv Service. It was decided to experiment on the Domain with a small dam located on the University farm which was then used to pasture a herd of cattle w supplied milk for the University's dairy operation. With technical assistance from the Soil Conservation Service, the dam was built in 1953. As the first si body of fresh water available to the community, this small lake was very popular for swimming, boating, fishing and birdwatching. Shorebirds and migr waterfowl soon were seen using it. Encouraged by the success of this project, McCrady and Cheston saw the potential for an economically feasible sol to the water problem facing Sewanee and for adding much diversity to the Domain by creating aquatic environments for recreation, wildlife, housing and other purposes.

Following a year's observation of the "Farm Pond", as it's called now, the University administration began planning for a much larger earthen and impoundment area, the principal purpose of which would be as a source of domestic water for the Sewanee community. A forested site close to the c was to be selected which would provide maximum water storage with minimal capital investment and water transport costs.

A site was selected for a sixteen-acre lake a short distance south of the University airport. Clearing for the lake began in the summer of 1955 dam containing approximately 17,000 cubic yards of soil was constructed. In 1958 water from Lake O'donnell was cut into the system, and in 19 last spring, then supplying some 45,000 gallons of water a day was cut out along with well water. Even with this supply increase, the University quickly to find a site for a second water-supply lake with a much larger storage capacity. The location selected was on land belonging to Dr. Harold who generously gave it to the University. The earthen dam, completed in April of 1968, impounds water over a 35-acre area which has more th the storage capacity of Lake O'Donnell. Since 1968, Lakes Jackson and O'Donnell have been the only sources of water entering the mains.

Once the feasibility of building low-cost earthen dams had been demonstrated by the two lakes created in 1953 and 1955-56, Cheston t attention toward building lakes on the Domain for a variety of purposes other than for the community's water needs. Thus, between 1953 and 196 lakes in addition to those described previously were constructed—one to provide water for grass greens on the golf course, one to serve as the com principal swimming and picnic facility (Lake Cheston), two to enhance the attractiveness of dormitory locations, two to establish residential su around, one for the use of Sewanee Military Academy cadets (this lake now gone like SMA), and six in the rather remote northwestern parts of th principally as a source of water for wildlife and for forest fire suppression when needed. All of the lakes were stocked with fish and all have served as t and permanent habitats for a variety of wildlife. Many years ago, winter temperatures were continuously low enough for a thick layer of ice to f

, thus enabling them to be used for ice skating. In the opinion of the author, the creation of these lakes has turned out to be the most beneficial physical ge on the Domain in the last half century.

ion of Residential Subdivisions

In the early 1950's there was a severe shortage of housing for University employees. Confronted with this problem which had begun to affect itment of faculty, the University initiated a program in the late 50's and early 60's of building rental houses, which were scattered around the central us on vacant lots except for clusters in a few areas such as Woodland and Faculty Circle. However,with the expansion of the student body and an enlarged nore affluent faculty and staff, a strong demand was appearing for new environments in which to build more elaborate privately owned homes.

Thus began the era of residential subdivision creation with Charles Cheston doing most of the site selection, road location, surveying and mapping, onstruction supervision. Mentioned previously were two residential developments built around the shores of two small lakes. One was Running Knob w and the other was between Proctor's Hall Road and Maxon Lane. Both proved enormously popular and filled up quickly. Similarly, other outlying were made ready for building of privately owned homes during this period. These include Clara's Point Road, Green's View Road, and farther away the campus, Rattlesnake Springs. These residential developments were the forerunners of more recent ones including Oak Hill Circle, Carpenter Circle, Viggins' Creek.

ruction of Firelanes

Forest fires have always been of great concern to the University, and historically fire suppression has received priority even over the teaching of classes. o the early 1950's, vehicular access to most of the outlying areas of the Domain was nonexistent, making it impossible for firefighting crews to reach while they were still small enough to be easily extinguished.

Recognizing that without adequate forest fire control on the Domain, many land rojects which he hoped to introduce could not be successful, Cheston made plans to open up the Domain with a network of firelanes which when leted extended for a total of some 15 miles. These essentially were forest roads which were graded, ditched, equipped with culverts, and sown with nd served as firebreaks as well as for access. The locations for these firelanes were first laid out on the topographic map which was made in 1947, and urveyed and flagged in the field by the two young foresters then on the faculty. Contractors equipped with bulldozers were employed to clear trees he routes and construct the roads. As an aesthetic addition, white pine seedlings were planted along many of the firelanes. Some 40 years later these ngs have grown to be large, stately trees which now add much beauty for people traversing the lanes to enjoy.

It is somewhat ironical that the original purpose for constructing firelanes on the Domain was to facilitate forest fire control and silvicultural operations as today, they are used primarily for recreation by walkers, joggers, and by riders of bicycles and horses. The firelanes, providing miles of attractive mmediately accessible from the stables, have proved to be of particular importance in furthering the growth of the University's highly successful rian program.

uction of Deer

In the late 1950's deer were rarely present on the Domain. Following the construction of the several small lakes in the most remote parts of the Domain d via the Breakfield Road, thereby insuring a permanent water source for wildlife Cheston arranged for the State to release about five doe and two buck At the same time, a trapping program was initiated to reduce the number of predators—wild dogs and bobcats—known to attack deer. A series of timber the time opened up the forest whereby regeneration provided ample browse. Thus, the deer were endowed with water, food, cover, relative freedom redators and a no-hunting policy on the Domain. Over the years since the first deer were released, their population has exploded, much to the vexation Friends of Abbo's Alley and many homeowners. These animals today are seen everywhere on the Domain and a dozen or so are on permanent welfare around the Ravine Garden, thanks to the availability of tasty shrubs planted by thoughtful people.

Management

Trained as a forester and with unusual opportunities to practice his profession on several thousand acres of relatively undisturbed hardwood forests, n initiated several forest management projects on the Domain in the late 40's and early 50's. These included organizing a more effective forest-fire l program, preparation of a forest management plan based on an inventory of forest resources, annual programs for planting large numbers of pine gs, for carrying out sizeable timber sales followed by forest stand improvement measures, and for wildlife habitat improvement. Also, recognizing ue of forestry research, he began to solicit political support for establishing a U. S. Forest Service Forestry Research Center at Sewanee. This effort proved ccessful with the opening of the Center on the Sewanee campus in 1956 where ined for almost 30 years before being closed and moved to a new location in an ng state. During their time in Sewanee, Forest Service personnel, numbering r eight at one point, carried out basic and applied research on the Domain and stland in middle Tennessee.

The years in which most of the land use changes described in this brief history curring were years when the University's financial resources were being argely to campus building construction, increased financial aid for students, rovement in faculty and staff compensation. Little money was available for f the natural resource management projects described herein, i.e., lakes, , pine plantations ,etc., which have contributed so much diversity to the nd pleasure for students, residents, and visitors. A little known fact is that eir development costs was paid for by revenues from selling Domain timber, enues also financed in part the construction of the Snowden Forestry Building, Charles Cheston raised most of the money.
